some favored mortal whose physical being is the most complete and beautiful translation of that which is immortal. When we thrill before the matchless face and form of Ristori as it moves before us in wonderous personation of the past; when we behold the most famillar youthful presence transformed on the maric platform of the tableaux the past; when we behold the most fa-miliar youthful presence transformed on the magic platform of the lableaux into hero, oriental queen, ideal maid of poetic romance, cherub, sybli, angel or saint; when in some mood of divine tenderness or crisis of duty, the com-monest humanity suddenly shines be-fore us in a marvelous dignity and love-liness; when in our own highest moliness; when in our own highest mo-ments we feel ourselves "all compact," form and spirit blended in one; in such

An Arab expresses his idea of the beauty of a woman by saying that she has the eye of a gazelle. This is the burden of his song. It became us, he said, to cultivate the body as part and parcel of our immortality, for he believed in the resurrection of the body and the spirit; or, in other words, that the two were conjoined for time and eternity. We quote from this portion of the sermon, as follows:

"In fact, the more we know of our bodies, the more evident it becomes that they are not merely the temporary coloning of the spirit, but in some divine and mysterious way are bound up with the innermost life of our immortal scale. duration of human life is greater in the United States than in any other nation.

It appears that, on the first day of January, the average price of wheat per bushel was $3 19 in South Carolina, and only $1 42 in Iowa. While this stape was selling for $1 45 a bushel in Texas, the average price paid for it across the river, in Louisiana, was $250. It can be bought in Illinois for $1 35 and sold in Delaware for $3; bought in Kansas for $1 91 and sold in Colorado for $2 60; bought in Missouri for $2 01 and sold in Western Virginia for $2 67;

The Philadelphia Inquirer has had access to some interesting statistics concerning the holders of that portion of the debt known as the Seven-Thirty Bonds. It seems from its statement that the aggregate amount of these bonds is $30,000,000, of various denominations, the highest being five thousand dollar notes, of which there are 7,795; the next highest are one thousand dollar notes, of which there are $70,372; of the five hundred dollar notes there are $50,032; of the one hundred dollar notes there are $450,032; of the one hundred dollar notes there are $1,276,416; while of fifty notes there are 1,376,416; while of fifty dollar notes there are 890,198. This was sold in Delaware for $3; bought in Kansas for $191 and sold in Colorado for $2 60; bought in Missouri for $2 67; bought in Iowa for $1 42 and sold in Western Virginia for $2 67; bought in Iowa for $1 42 and sold in Mischigan for $2 55. The same inequality appears in the prices of rye, barley, oats, corn, &c.

Now, how is this inequality to be accounted for? How is it that the same articles of produce vary so much in price at points not remote from each other? Is there a lack of means for transportation? Or are the carrying rates so high and the wastage so great, that products cannot be shipped from point to point with profit to the shipper pers? This is a matter which will certainly repay attention and investigation.

Horace Greekley, in a recent temperance address in Philadelphia, stated the following as an evidence that there had been great improvement since he was a boy: "I remember it was talked of as a great scandal because a man did not furnish liquor at the funeral of his little child. Indeed it was regarded quite as necessary that a host; should furnish his visitors with liquor as that he should furnish them with chairs. If I recollect aright, on the installation of the Rev. Dr. Lord, ex-President of Dartmouth College, as a young and eloquent clergyman in my native town, everybody was very drunk. In fact, I don't think I ever saw a more drunken time in my life."
